A Nover Surp .- The Nushua Telegraph says that two mechanics have been for some time enguged in building a small experimental ship there, which will be launched when complete, in the Nashua river and make a trial trip. It is of thirty-two feet beam and eight feet depth of hold, and its peculiarity is in the propelling power, which is a novelty, invented by James A. Hamitton, of Maine, who has followed the sea for many years. It is thus described: The propelling power is to be a turbine wheel, set at the bottom of a flume rising five feet from the ship's bottom. The water enters the flume from the ship's sides, just below the water-line. This opening is provided with a valve to prevent the water from returning when the ship larches in a rough sen. How is the water to leave the ship? is the natural inquiry. From the bottom of the flame, near the turbine-wheel, a tunnel eighteen inches in diameter extends along the shrp's bottom to the extreme stern, which is to be so constructed as to constitute a racuum, and is to be supplied with a set of revolving fans to accelerate the egress of water, and with valves to prevent the inflowing of the water from the stern. The water in the flume will have a head of five feet, farnishing a power of nine horse. The inventor, who is one of the workmen, expects to secure one hundred revolutions of the screw before the outer valve in the tunnel is reached by the outflowing current of water, or a rate of speed equal to five miles an hour. A moving vessel always makes a trough in the sea at the stern, and the faster the vestel moves the greater the trough. This trough will lessen to a considerable extent the pressure on the outer tunnel valve, and the remaing force necessary to overcome the pressure open the valves and release the water, is expected to be created by the movement of the vessel itself The principal is that which will empty the bow of a common clay pipe drawn rapidly through the water. Once in motion, the ship is expected to attain a rate of speed only equalled by the power

BIRD MIGRATIONS.—It seems inexplicable how nany birds find their way back to exactly the "Five torts have been taken. The troops which same haunts of the previous year, and this is more extraordinary when we consider the disdefended them are reported as numbering 11,000. tance betweed their Winter and Summer retreats. I have often wondered how tiny warblers find their way from Northern Europe to Central Africa, and at the very short time spent by certain birds on their journey. The cuckoo appears in England just as soon as we find it in Southern Italy. It has seemed to me that bird migrations may be performed in the following ways: Such birds as push furtherest inland at one point du not do so at the other. For example, the swallows and insectivorous birds that frequent Northern Europe may content themselves with the climate of Algeria and Lower Egypt, while the rest Governor Cooke nominated Lewis H. Douglass from Italy and Southerr. Europe push to equatorial latitudes, and vice versa. A great many warblers from Northern Europe spend their Winter in the South and in the islands of the Mediterranean, while the majority go still further southward. But why should individuals of the same species remain in cold clanates when others migrato to warm countries? For example, the redbreast braves the severest Winters in Britain, white the robins of Southern Europe migrate to Africa, and the same may be said of the songthrush and blackbird; and I ascertained that the same birds as met with in the South are relatively smaller than their Northern compoers. The power to resist very low temperatures is somewhat strange. I have noticed the pied-wagtail, as well as the bee-enter and chiff chaff, become feeble when the thermometer stood eight or nice in the matter is in accordance with established degrees above freezing. PICTURES IN HOSPITALS.-I rejoice to hear that more than one of our London hospitals is making some sort of effort to adorn their wards with such pictures, cheap though they may be, as may fill the eyes of the poor sufferers within, and to divert their thoughts from their own misery men. One of the greatest evils of that heaviest of all curses, sickness, is the wretched self-absorption of it-the miseracle way in which the poor wretch was overything through the medium of his own min and sickness. And I don't doubt that in many cases such glimpses of happiness help most materially the means used for his recovery, even if they are not more potent than "poppy or mandragors, and all the drowsy syrups of the East," to give rest and peace to the tempest tossed sufferer. I can speak from personal experience of the refreshment derived in sickness from such a source; and I know by incurable disease, and who makes a point of to time with the brightest and gagest paper she can get, to change the current of her thoughts.
